WHY IT WORKS

Handwash works through surfactant action on the skin surface: lathering activates the surfactant system, which surrounds and lifts surface oils, dirt, and transient microbial contamination, suspending them in the rinse water. Neutral pH is important because skin has a natural acid mantle at pH 4.5–5.5 — repeated washing with alkaline products disrupts this and causes the dryness that makes hands uncomfortable. A neutral formulation cleans effectively without disturbing the skin's natural surface chemistry.

WHAT YOU GET FROM ONE PACK

1.5 ml per pump.

One 5-litre pack. Over 3,300 hand washes. At standard pump output of 1.5 ml per push, a single 5L pack delivers over 3,300 individual hand washes. For a family of 4 washing hands 8 times daily each, one pack lasts approximately a month. For a small office of 10 people, approximately 3 weeks — at a per-wash cost far below any individual consumer handwash bottle.
